August 24, 2025

Dear Sisters and Brothers in Christ,

During this time of year, schools of all kind restart and that includes our universities. We welcome back the students at San Francisco State and City College who are restarting their classes for another academic year. With classes resuming, that means the Campus Ministry program is also reconvening. We also welcome back the missionary team from the Fellowship of Catholic University Students (FOCUS) who will be working with Father Liliedahl during the year.

During this final week of summer, we are grateful for the time of rest and rejuvenation we have received during these past months. As work, school, and activities restart for another year, when the busyness of life begins to overtake us, may we recall God is present to us to bring us his rest and peace in that moment.

Background on today's Gospel Reading

Today's Gospel reading is the third of three parables in chapter 13 that deal with the theme of the unexpected reversals brought by the Kingdom of God. The other two parables are about the tiny mustard seed that grows into a large tree and the small amount of yeast that makes a large batch of dough rise. All three are about the few and the many and the Kingdom of God.

As this parable opens, Luke reminds us that Jesus is making his way to Jerusalem. This journey, this exodus as Luke refers to it, makes up the entire middle of the Gospel. He is teaching as he goes. A question from the crowd gives Jesus the chance to make a prophetic statement. Luke uses this question device a number of times in his Gospel. A few weeks ago, the question "What must I do to inherit eternal life?" led to the parable of the Good Samaritan. The question about will only a few be saved uses typical Christian language about salvation but also expresses the Jewish concern about whether everyone who calls himself a Jew is actually faithful to the covenant. This was a concern of the Pharisees.

Jesus answers that they must strive in the time remaining to enter through the narrow door because many will be trying to get in but won't be strong enough. He then moves to a parable about another door. (The translation says "gate" then "door," but the same Greek word is used.) Once all those entering the master's house are in and he locks the door, there will be no way for others to get in. Those left outside may knock, but the master will say he doesn't know them. Unlike the Gospel reading from a few weeks ago where Jesus was teaching about prayer, and we were told to knock and the door would be opened, in this parable, the master will not open and say he does not know us. People from the north, south, east, and west will take our place inside. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and all the prophets will take our place in the Kingdom of God. Those who do not make it through the narrow door will be cast out to where there is wailing and grinding of teeth.

The image of the door is replaced in the final verses of the parable with the image of the heavenly banquet. Two passages from the Book of Isaiah influence the conclusion. Isaiah 43:5-6 speaks of God bringing Israel's descendants back from the east and from the west, the north and the south. And Isaiah 25:6 speaks of the Lord providing a feast of rich foods and choice wines for all peoples on his holy mountain. The answer to the question if only a few will be saved is no. In the end, many will be saved, but many who thought they would be saved will not be saved. The parable is a prophetic warning to repentance in order to enter the kingdom.

"The Communion Procession"

What would happen if, in Communion, we took literally Jesus' prophecy in today's gospel that the last will be first and the first will be last? That's just what Roger Cardinal Mahony wanted to do in his own envisioning of what Sunday Mass might be like in the Archdiocese of Los Angeles if the entirety of the assembly made the sharing of Communion more than just lining up to receive the Body and Blood of Christ.

In his pastoral letter on the liturgy, "Gather Faithfully Together" (1997), Cardinal Mahony described a community that desired to understand and reflect better what it meant for the Body of Christ, the church, to receive the Body of Christ in the Eucharist. That need led to exploring a practice that would replace an individualistic approach to sharing Communion with one in which the communal procession; helped foster unity among the people and restore a sense of wonder and thanksgiving in the Eucharist.

The cardinal described a communion procession in which the first to come forward down the aisle toward the altar were not those seated in the front pews but those in the very back of the church. Imagine everyone in the assembly surrounded by the members of the Body of Christ singing together as they come forward to share in the Body of Christ. Imagine being aware not just of the people sitting by you but those who stay in the back whom you might never see, who may feel too self-conscious or unworthy or who, for whatever reason, had a difficult time choosing to be at Mass that day but made it nonetheless.
